

*We are all addicts. We are all obsessives.
We are all, in some form, sleepwalking through our lives.*

This is a book about waking up.

Drawing on fifteen years as a market researcher and his own experience of mania, corporate life and solitude, Harsh Maskara offers a guide to inner peace that refuses to be comfortable. No retreats to book, no mantras to chant.

Moving through fourteen essays, Eagles Fly Alone takes on the questions most self-help books sidestep: obsession, empathy, addiction, creativity, free will and the soul.

The door to inner peace has always been there. You just need the key.

Harsh Maskara is a Kolkata-based writer and researcher. His work is raw and deeply personal — drawn from his own experience of mania, recovery and reinvention. He is the author of Making Friends with Mania, Deliberate, Naked, Asylum and Anonymity.
