

Mania is the snake-like energy which exists coiled at the base of the spine for all of us.

What happens when passionate distance running awakens it?

In this raw, unflinching memoir, Harsh Maskara traces his journey from obsessive barefoot runner to a week in a Mumbai psych ward — and the long, unglamorous road back. Drawing on Vedic astrology, the Mahabharata and fifteen years of research into the human mind, he argues that mania is not a disorder to be sedated but a force to be understood.

A book for runners, for seekers, and for anyone who has ever felt their mind run ahead of them.

Harsh Maskara is a Kolkata-based writer and researcher. He is the author of Eagles Fly Alone, Deliberate, Naked, Asylum and Anonymity.

MAKING FRIENDS WITH MANIA

A Runner's Journey into Bipolar

Harsh Maskara