

*Most self-help books tell you how to live.
This one asks you to think.*

Eight essays on the subjects that quietly govern every life — thoughts, the mind, sex, relationships, weight, technology, love and death.

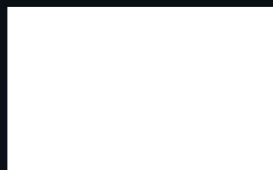

There is no ten-step programme here. No morning routine guaranteed to change your life. What there is instead is a sustained, unsettling invitation to examine the assumptions you have never thought to question.

The middle path is a lazy option. Deliberateness is something else entirely.

Harsh Maskara is a Kolkata-based writer and researcher. He is the author of Making Friends with Mania, Eagles Fly Alone, Naked, Asylum and Anonymity.

DELIBERATE

Eight Essays on How to Live

Harsh Maskara